

The movie motion picture, "The Kingdom" has left a mark as more than just a Hollywood film. "The Kingdom" went into the heart of the Middle East to give people a real grasp on terrorism. It looks into the hearts of the innocent and the minds of the mass murders. The movie really hit home when describing the society in the Middle East. Over all "The Kingdom" was a hit in many people's eyes!

For example, four FBI agents (Flurry, Sykes, Mayes, and Leavitt) go to Saudi Arabia to investigate a crime and catch the leader of the Middle East's best terrorist. The attack was set in the middle of a children's baseball game killing many citizen and blowing up an apartment building. The terrorist attacks only get worse when the agents get there. Instantly, they find themselves in the middle of a terrorist attack with one agent kidnapped, bullets being fired in all directions, and no way out. Agent Flurry goes with his gut and try's to save the day but quickly the agents find themselves in over there heads and very little ammo left.

Also, I got a better grasp on the Middle East by watching the first scene of the movie. When I looked at terrorism, I thought of a guy just making a name for him self walking down a street with guns. I didn't realize how serious terrorism was until I saw fear in the people's eyes and the figure of the guy on roof making a child watch the crime in action. I felt the pain that they were feeling as they ran and dodged for cars. I noticed from then on that there are good people in the Middle East trying to but a halt on terrorism. It's now understandable why American solders are over seas, to make a difference for the rest of the world.

There were a lot of good scenes in the kingdom but my favorite scene was when they went into the apartment building to find Agent Leavitt. There was so much suspense has they went from door to door not knowing what would happen when they opened it. I believe that that scene represents courage and strength. Everyone came together and tried to save the Agent. That scene showed me that when everyone comes together, something can get accomplished.

For me, the most favorable scene of the Middle East was when Agent Mayes was going door to door trying to find Agent Leavitt and seen the little girl crying out in fear. When she seen the rest of the family Agent Mayes could tell they were scared and didn't want any harm. Immediately Agent Mayes started saying, "mulish" (stay here). Agent Mayes left the room quickly because she realized that the family was just trying to make it through the day. This scene showed me that there are people in the Middle East that are harmless and don't want any trouble but they are stuck in the in the turmoil of hatred.

The first scene of the movie had to be the most unfavorable scene out of the whole entire movie. With cars flying by, guns firing, and kids playing the scene was chaos. For someone to destroy a children's baseball game by attacking them for no

This is a really good opening

Team effort to fight terrorism 2